

COSTUMES WILL BE IN KEEPING with the name at the Arctic Ball tomorrow night. Miss Betty Gies will give a solo dance at art students' Christmas frolic.

KISS OF WARMTH TO AWAKEN FROZEN SNOWFLAKE at the Fine Arts Ball. Alice Harris and Jerrie Meyer will enact the roles of Jack Frost and Snow Queen.

REGISTERING SHIVERS. Miss Marjorie Collison in one of stunts at Arctic Ball.

IN WHIRLING SNOWFLAKE BALLET. Virginia McCarty and Peggy Lipp as they will appear tomorrow night at the Academy of the Fine Arts festivities.

REQUIRED FIFTEEN MEN to handle this last Christmas tree, erected by the South Eighth Street and Visiting Business Men's Association at Eighth and Carpenter streets.

THE ICE PROVED TOO SLIPPERY for Dick Omeova, one of the many skaters lured out on the Haverford pond by the brisk weather and clear sky.

MISS MILDRED VICKERS, one of Haverford High School basketball stars.

ALL READY FOR DECORATIONS. The Christmas tree which arrived at City Hall Band Stand was erected in a jiffy, and will no doubt present a noble appearance when trimmed.

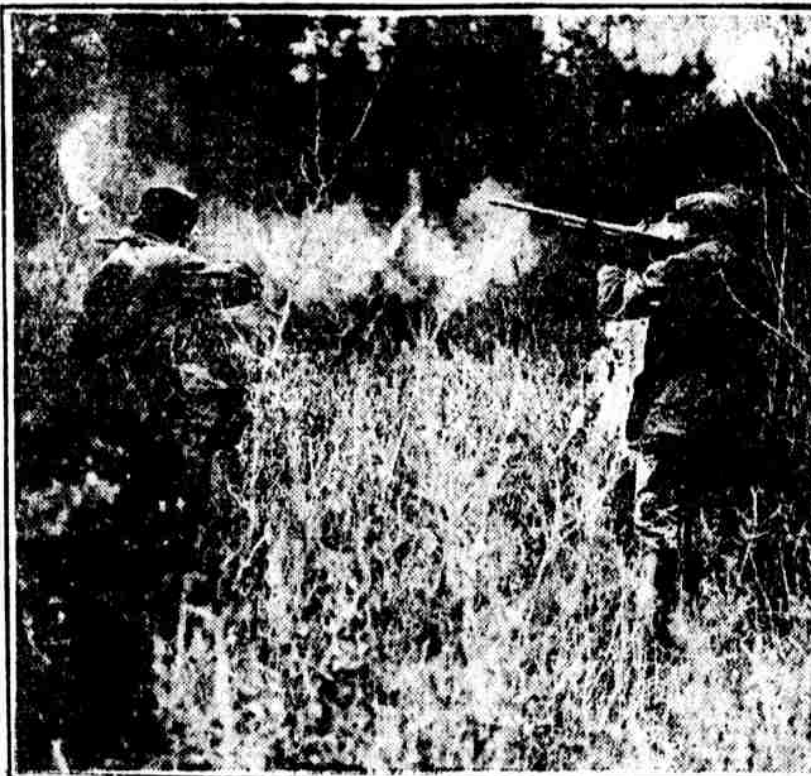

ONE WAY OF SOLVING THE COAL QUESTION is pictured above. The camera caught boys and dogs kicking it up by the lump along the railroad tracks and under the very wheels of the gondolas along Washington avenue. The shortage of fuel combines with the cold weather to make this a hard Christmas for many, as thousands of families face empty coal bins with little relief in sight.

OPEN SEASON FOR DEER HUNTING GOT UNDER WAY in New Jersey yesterday, and hundreds of Philadelphia hunters took to the swamps and woods. The law allows a hunter to kill only one buck a year. Angelo Mamone and Frank Lamigano, lucky enough to bag one, are pictured on the left with their kill. Jack Hughes and Cornelius Langhurn, two Philadelphia Nimrods, are shown on the right banging away.

ALL THE JOYS OF A REAL YULETIDE were experienced by fifty-five little children, guests of the Shrine Club at the Hotel Adelphia. After a royal turkey dinner the happy youngsters were each given a box of Christmas presents containing toys and useful articles. On the left are John W. Taylor and W. Freeland Kendrick, two of the hosts who helped entertain. Mrs. Kendrick is pictured in the center with one of the crippled guests. On the right is Bill Aiken, who acted as Santa Claus.

OFF FOR SIX MONTHS' SKETCHING TOUR. Miss Edith Emerson and Miss Violet Oakley, noted Philadelphia artists, sail for Europe.

DR. RICHARD A. F. PENROSE elected President Academy of Natural Science.

SECRETARY OF NAVY DENBY played football on U. of M. team in 1896.

THIS OLD-TIME VIEW OF THE "CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION OF 1876" was made from the Observatory at George's Hill, showing the English Commission building in the foreground. A glimpse of Horticultural Hall is obtained in background. Contributed by Victor Angerer, 23 Morton avenue Ridley Park. Send us your old-Philadelphia photographs.

MRS. W. J. RANIGER, of Denver, bought mistletoe while shopping here.

FAIR HAVERFORD HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALLERS. Virginia Vernon, Captain Edna French and Helen Lockwood are three fast members of their school team.
